1. PURPOSE

The purpose of this report is to identify the Information Exchange Requirements (IER) between operational elements of the Initial Brigade Combat Team (IBCT) for delivery of health services in a theater of operations. This output of the AMEDD Information Exchange Database was generated in support of the C4RDP process.

2. SCOPE

1. This report is limited to the identification of IERs associated with the Evacuation and Health Care Delivery Operational Areas of the AMEDD Operational Architecture. Note: The AMEDD Operational Architecture is currently in development. Since all of the Operational Areas, i.e. MedLog, Medical Force Protection, and Medical C2, have not been completed at the time of this report there may be future changes to the IERs identified.
2. This report is limited to the identification of Inter-Organizational/Nodal IERs.
3. This report focuses on the IBCT during a major theater war in the 2010 time frame.
4. This report assumes that the essential augmentation prescribed for the IBCT is in the area of responsibility.
5. The attribute fields and resulting level of IER aggregation are limited to those identified as supporting the C4RDP process.

4 ANALYSIS

Table 1, IBCT Description Summary, provides a summary of the health services support organizations identified as a part of the IBCT concept. This summary assumes that the essential augmentation elements have arrived and are functional in the area of responsibility.

Table 2, IBCT Workload Rate Summary, shows the medical workload rates for each of the organizations in Table 1 that have a health care delivery function. The workload rate data was derived from analysis data provided by the Force Structure and Analysis Branch titled “TAA-007 Combined (NEA SWA) 30-Day Peak”. The data represents the weighted average of the occurrence rate over a 24-hour period for each workload driver (event) during the worst 30-Day period for two wartime scenarios.

Table 3, IBCT Operational Elements Input Data, provides the Operational Elements input data that was used to extract the IERs from the database. These data provide the descriptors used to identify the operational elements and their total number in the analysis scenario specific to the IBCT concept. Their relationship to the actual unit designations is provided in the ‘Operational Element Designation in Model’ column of the IBCT concept summary presented in Table 1.

Table 4, Operational Element To Node Type Mapping Input Data, provides the Operational Element to Node Type mapping input data that was used to extract the IERs from the database. This data describes the relationship between the operational elements specific to the IBCT and the generic Operational Node Types used to characterize the IERs in the database. The Operational Elements that are described as Reference relate to those elements that exhibit a health service workload, e.g. where individual patients are provided care. Those that are described as Secondary relate to the Node Type and its Operational Element at other end of each link emanating from the Reference Node Type as identified on the Node Connectivity Diagram.

Table 5, Operational Element Rate Input Data, provides the Operational Element Rate input data that was used to extract the IERs from the database. This data provides the daily number of occurrences for each type of workload driver associated with the Operational Elements.

5 RESULTS

The results of this analysis are presented in Table 8, IBCT Information Exchange Requirements Matrix, and were also provided as a separate Microsoft Excel spreadsheet. The fields in the IBCT IER Matrix are defined in Table 6, IBCT - C4RDP IER Matrix Field Descriptors.

Several of the fields use coded inputs which are consistent with the Army Core Architecture Data Model (ARCADM) and are defined in Table 7, ARCADM Code Descriptors.

Table 6: IBCT - C4RDP IER Matrix Field Descriptors

Field No.	Field Name	Description
1:	ID	A unique identifier number for each IER.
2:	Producer Title	The Operational Element that originally produce the information.
3.	Producer Function	The Army Universal Task List identifier for the function being performed resulting in the original production of the information.
4	Consumer Title	The Operational Element that requires the information.
5	Consumer Function	The Army Universal Task List identifier for the function being performed that requires the information.
6	IE Term Name	The name given to the information being exchanged.
7	Frequency	The total number of times during a day that this information needs to be exchanged within the area of responsibility.
8	Service Type	The type of information exchange. This may refer to the method of exchange, e.g. courier, or the nature of the exchange, e.g. Voice. The codes used are consistent with Army Core Architecture Data Model (ARCADM).
9	Speed of Service	The maximum time between identification of the need for the exchange and access to the information to meet operational requirements. The codes used are consistent with Army Core Architecture Data Model (ARCADM).
10	Cost of Failure	The potential result if the information exchange can not be accomplished within the time specified. The codes used are consistent with Army Core Architecture Data Model (ARCADM).
11	Message Classification	The classification level given to the information being exchanged. The codes used are consistent with Army Core Architecture Data Model (ARCADM).

Field No.	Field Name	Description
12	Message Length	The anticipated size in kilobits of the information if digitized for transmission. This number does not account for any processing, e.g. compacting, or system related requirements, e.g. error correction or routing data.
